Park Avenue Synagogue Dedication Ceremony at U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum on Monday, May 15

On Monday, May, 15, 1995, Park Avenue Synagogue will officially become one of the supporting synagogues whose name will be engraved onto the special granite Congregational Wall in the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum's Donor Lounge.

Congregants are invited to attend a moving ceremony at the museum when we shall also become "twinning" with one of the great liberal synagogues of Berlin which was destroyed during the Kristalnacht pogrom on November 9, 1938.

Rabbi Lincoln recommended that we remember a synagogue similar to our own in terms of its philosophy of Judaism, and its having been of equal prominence and size, and Dr. Sybil Milton, a historian of the Holocaust Research Institute, chose the Fasanenstrasse Liberal Synagogue in Berlin, Germany. This synagogue, which was inaugurated on August 12, 1912, is located in the Fasanenstrasse 79-80 in the district of Charlottenburg, which was one of the fashionable areas. It was one of the best-known synagogues in Berlin.

From the street, the building looked more like a church than a synagogue because of many changes in the plans of architect Ehrenfried Hessel insisted on by the building authorities. Because of the still-prevalent anti-Semitism, on the one hand, and the established position of the Jews, on the other hand, this synagogue was a monument of self-confidence. While the outside design was very simple, the inside of the synagogue was decorated with colorful mosaics. The apartments for the employees were located in the Annex; the wedding chapel, the religious school, and a small synagogue were located in the back of the building.

Leo Baeck, the rabbi of the community, prayed there often. And a couple of months after the inauguration, on October 12, 1912, Emperor Wilhelm II visited the synagogue.

In the early thirties, the synagogue was already a target of anti-Semitic riots. On the evening of the second Jewish New Year's Day, on September 12, 1931, some members of the "Hitler-jugend"

WEG's Annual Joyce Kagan Health Night Program on Stress Management

Dr. Marcia Greenleaf

At 7:30 P.M. on Monday, March 20th, the Women's Evening Group will sponsor an open program meeting on the topic of stress management. Entitled: "Many Balls in the Air: Juggling Made Easier," the program will be led by Dr. Marcia Greenleaf, a psychologist who specializes in treating stress and psycho-social problems related to medical illness, trauma, and just day-to-day living.

As part of an interactive program, Dr. Greenleaf will present a sampler of how the mind-body-vision techniques used in medicine can be applied to day-to-day living. She will teach three "stress-breaking" and stress management techniques. In these techniques, she incorporates traditional health psychology, physiological suggestion, and Eastern breathing methods to maximize an individual's potential to meet personal, academic, and professional goals.

Dr. Greenleaf is an assistant clinical professor in the department of psychiatry at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine. While at Einstein, she created a service for patients, families, and staff to treat bio-psycho-social stress related to physical illness and hospitalization.

She has received the Milton H. Erickson Award for Excellence in Scientific Writing and a National Service Research Award from the National Cancer Institute to evaluate and develop programs at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer

19th Shabbat Morning Liturgical Music Service March 25, 1995

On Saturday morning, March 25th, the Main Sanctuary will be filled with the glorious music of our annual Classical Shabbat Morning Liturgical Music Service, marking the 19th successive year of this special annual event.

Through this venue, inaugurated by Cantor David Lefkowitz in March, 1977, the music of Jewish worship from the large European synagogues of the 19th and 20th centuries has been revived and creatively revitalized in the same way that our Jewish heritage and traditions are constantly developing and evolving.

Historically, "in our tradition, worship services and prayers were never routine." Although "there were familiar strains in the form of the compositions," there was always room for deviation, for a fresh approach so that the music did not remain fixed and static.

"Vocal music is interpretation of the sacred prayer texts in the same way that rabbinic commentary is interpretation of the Biblical and Talmudic texts, always finding new meanings in ancient stories."

Moreover, to reach the highest level of prayer by finding new meanings in the texts, from Temple times on, choirs, through their harmonizing with cantors, have helped cantors to interpret and reach for those higher levels.

In addition, the combination of prayer and beautiful music seeks to take us to a higher plane, "to elevate our thinking toward a divine being. And because they are the prayers of our people, making music for them becomes a lofty purpose."

In Cantor Lefkowitz's own words: "I have a passionate love of the great musical heritage that we have at Park Avenue Synagogue, and I want to share this heritage with our congregants and would like them to experience the joy that I, myself, experience, of knowing Judaism on one of its highest levels—through the hazzanut and the choral tradition that grew up around the hazzanut."

Furthermore, "the experience of heightened worship is made possible through the efforts of the choir, the conductor, and the organist who collec-

From The Rabbi's DeskMore Spirituality?

At the first meeting of my Introduction to Judaism class, I always ask everyone two questions: "Why are you here?" and "What do you hope to gain from being here?"

Some people come to learn more about their Judaism. Others come to learn more about Judaism because they are contemplating conversion. Behind each of these reasons there are many unique and wonderful stories. The expectations, on the other hand, are more uniform. "I want to gain a greater knowledge and understanding of Judaism." "I want to have a greater sense of spirituality in my life."

Spirituality. It's a word we use a lot these days, so much so that its meaning has become somewhat amorphous. What does this need for a greater sense of spirituality mean?

It seems to mean a need for a place of comfort where we can feel at one with ourselves (with our souls) and with God. We want to believe that, once we reach this spiritual place, we will be able to grasp the meaning of our existence and feel the holiness in our lives.

This desire for spirituality goes beyond the basic knowledge and understanding of Judaism. This desire for spirituality cries out from inside and says: how do I do this Jewish stuff and have it affect me, and have it make my life more meaningful, more holy?

I assume many of us struggle with this issue. I know I do. And, I am not always so good at it. Being a rabbi does not mean that spirituality is easy, that it is finished, that it requires no more work. Far from it. It requires constant work and constant energy. It is a continuous struggle. And each struggle does not always end in success.

The thing that worries me is that spirituality seems to be something that we want to be provided with, rather than something we want to work towards. We think, I want to be more spiritual, rather than I need to make time in my busy schedule to read up on a given prayer, to think about it, to internalize it, to make it my own.

I am guilty of that desire too. I want spirituality to be handed to me. I don't want to have to work at it. But, the truth is that spirituality is not something that someone can give us. It is not something that comes from without. It is something that comes from within.

Spirituality is not a once achieved state that manages to last for a lifetime. It is a constant process of achieving, right on up there with all of our other aspirations. If it's going to happen, we've got to make it happen, each of us, for ourselves. No one else is going to do it for us.

— Rabbi Elana Zaiman

- Send mishloach manot, sometimes referred to as shalach manot, a gift of at least two kinds of food to at least one person.

- Give matanot l'evyonim, at least two gifts to two poor people (donations of food or money to the Park Avenue Synagogue Food Pantry or contributions to the Park Avenue Synagogue Welfare Fund or to the Committee for The Homeless & Community Outreach will fulfill this mitzvah.)

- Attend the 6:30 A.M. morning service and Megillah Reading on Thursday, March 16th.

- Enjoy a festive dinner late in the day of Purim on Thursday, March 16th.

Dedication Ceremony

attacked the synagogue during a ceremony. On the evening of November 9, 1938, a Nazi commando came to burn down the synagogue and all its connected buildings. The fire brigade protected the buildings next to the synagogue, but did nothing to stop the fire in it. However, the shell of the building was not damaged by the Allied air raids.

In 1958, the ruins of the building were demolished and a new community center was built on the site.

Rabbi Lincoln led a delegation of the New York Board of Rabbis to the center last summer and he reports that it is a magnificent facility with wedding halls, meeting rooms, a library for the ever-increasing Jewish community there and a kosher restaurant. Some elements of the old synagogue, such as the portal, were used in the new structure.

A bus will be leaving from the synagogue early on the morning of Monday, May 15. It is estimated that the ceremony will take place from 1 to 2 P.M. and it will be followed by a two hour mini-tour of the museum. Further details will be forthcoming. But, of course, those who wish to meet in Washington, D.C. can make their own arrangements.

Center to meet the psycho-social needs of women with breast cancer.

This unusual and thought-provoking program, co-chaired by Arline Lane and Margie Price, is this year's Women's Evening Group's Joyce Kagan Health Program, named in memory of one of WEG's former vice presidents.

While the program is open to the entire congregation, it is particularly designed to deal with stress management as it relates to women.

Refreshments will be served and there will be time for socializing both before and after the program which will begin at 8 P.M.

Sisterhood Concert on March 21 Will End the Mid-Winter Hiatus

Beautiful music by Selma Pakter, an internationally famous concert pianist, will welcome Sisterhood members and their guests back from the season's mid-winter break on Tuesday, March 21st at 1 P.M. Mrs. Pakter will entertain with selections from her extensive repertoire.

A graduate of Julliard, Mrs. Pakter also taught at that prestigious school and then went on to become a concert pianist, giving recitals all over the world, but mainly in the United States, Canada, Europe, and South America.

A Steinway artist, her last tour throughout the United Kingdom was met with great acclaim, particularly the concert she gave at Oxford University, where it was noted that she gave a "stellar performance."

Sisterhood is, indeed, fortunate that this superb artist was able to include the organization in her very crowded schedule.

The usual refreshment hour with time for socializing and renewing friendships will follow the concert.

So plan to attend, to relax and hear Selma Pakter work her keyboard magic!

Men's Club Friday Night Service March 17 at 6:15 P.M.

The annual Men's Club Friday Night Service will take place at 6:15 P.M. on March 17th. The guest speaker will be Randy L. Levine, Commissioner of Labor for the City of New York.

tively bring their own art to a common goal."

For the upcoming service, Cantor Lefkowitz will be featuring old music of selected Jewish composers and he will be "modifying large choral pieces into shorter, simpler forms to extract their melodic juices."

Cantor Lefkowitz will be joined by the majestic 18-voice Synagogue Concert Choir, led by the genius and inspired conducting of Abraham Kaplan, and complemented by the mastery of the organ on the part of Neil Robinson.

This wonderful occasion is made possible by funds provided by Mr. and Mrs. George M. Shapiro in memory of Sarah and Samuel Shapiro.

Congregants are invited to bring their friends to shul that morning to experience the beauty and spirit of a musical Shabbas davening. A gala kiddush and reception for the artists will follow this special Shabbat morning service.

Annual Teacher Recognition Dinner Held February 1

The esteemed faculty of the Park Avenue Synagogue Mazer School of Religious Studies, the Park Avenue Synagogue Early Childhood Center, and the Rabbi Judah Nadich High School were honored on Wednesday evening, February 1st at the annual Teacher Recognition Dinner.

A festive cocktail reception was held on the Fifth Floor, thanks to the hospitality of the Early Childhood Center, followed by a dinner and program on the Lower Level.

The evening's speaker was Susan Bandler, director of public education at the New Israel Fund in Washington, D.C., a bat mitzvah and alumna of the Park Avenue Synagogue Hebrew School. She spoke about her experiences in Israel both prior to and in her current position with the New Israel Fund as well as about the organization's objectives.

All of the details of this special annual event, which is deeply appreciated by the faculty, were again beautifully coordinated by Willa Rosenberg. We thank her for a lovely evening.

Purim Preview at the Judaica Gallery

This month, the Judaica Gallery at Park Avenue Synagogue, located off the synagogue's main lobby, will be featuring two special pre-Purim treats.

Judaica Classics is offering a full array of Purim baskets to help with your mishloach manot needs. These traditional Purim gifts of delicacies sent to family and friends will add special meaning to the upcoming holiday. Judaica Classics will be happy to take your orders and fill them in time for Purim, which falls on March 16th this year. Purim baskets start at $15.

In honor of Purim, Rimonim Booksellers has assembled an impressive collection of Jewish papercut art, including a magnificent one-of-a-kind Megillat Esther scroll, richly illuminated and decorated with dazzling papercuts by Israeli artist Enya Keshet.

Doina and Bleema wish the entire congregation a happy Purim and look forward to seeing you at the gallery.

Now through March 31, 1995, Park Avenue Synagogue members can enjoy a week of free fitness at the 92nd Street Y's Center for Health, Fitness and Sport. Just clip out this article and bring it to the Membership Services Office on the 3rd floor of the Y's 92nd Street building. Park Avenue Synagogue members who are already members of the Center for Health, Fitness and Sport will have their current membership extended by a week.

The 92nd Street Y Center for Health, Fitness and Sport has been hailed as "the most comprehensive fitness center in Manhattan" by Our Town. Its facilities include two air-conditioned gymnasiums for basketball and volleyball, seven racquetball courts, a 75' pool, more than 80 exercise classes each week (free to members), the latest in cardiovascular and strength conditioning equipment, steam rooms, saunas, whirlpools, massage, and much more.

Preferred members receive free overnight equipment storage, plus towel and laundry service. All members receive a free introductory fitness consultation and two personal training sessions. The Y's trainers and instructors are professionally trained and certified.

Adults, children and toddlers can take advantage of the Y's fitness facilities. Children can learn how to swim, take martial arts classes and train in gymnastics. Youngsters have all sorts of new and challenging equipment to slide on, crawl through, swing on, and pull across in the 10,000 cubic foot indoor playspace. Teens can play in basketball leagues. The Y has also been offering programs for senior adults and individuals at risk for heart disease for over two decades in their Coronary Detection and Intervention Center (CDIC).

All this in a warm and friendly Jewish environment. And, as a member of the Center for Health, Fitness and Sport, you will receive a 10% discount on all box office events and a free membership to the Bittenwieser Library.

Chancellor Schorsch's Visit to Germany

Rabbi Ismar Schorsch, the Chancellor of The Jewish Theological Seminary, went to Esslingen, Germany, his hometown, from which his family fled when he was three years old. The town had invited him back for the commemoration of his grandfather's death. Dr. Schorsch's grandfather ran a Jewish boarding school in the town. During the Nazi era, when the rest of his family fled, because his grandfather was afraid there would be nobody to run the school, he stayed in Esslingen and ultimately perished at Terezin. After the Holocaust, the town renamed the school for him.

During his trip back to Esslingen, Dr. Schorsch found remorse for the Holocaust in the German community, accompanied by widespread initiatives at the local level. The Chancellor termed these "a spiritual restitution," and offered a message of hope that young Germans are atoning for what occurred, stating that "the Germany of 1994 is not the Germany of 1944."

Lay Leadership Study at the Seminary

The Isidor and Rose Wagner Institute for Leadership Development, an intensive weeklong study program for lay leaders was held recently at the Seminary. Participants, who came from all over the country, studied Judaism's message regarding various life cycle issues such as birth, sickness, and death. The learning focused neither on reading books on the topics nor on lecture-style learning, but on accessing passages of Talmud and Halacha. Participants worked with Seminary faculty on various passages and struggled to glean the meaning themselves. They also engaged in sessions on personal religious development, in which faculty shared their own philosophies. The program also included an opportunity to do Jewish crafts and Shabbat was enhanced by lively discussions led by faculty and zemirot led by a cantorial student.

Participants expressed surprise and gratitude at how much they learned, how available the faculty made themselves, and how enlightening and moving the week was for them.

This intensive study institute was created by an endowment and will be held every year. Anyone interested should contact Dr. Anne Lapidus Lerner, Vice Chancellor for Public Affairs, at The Jewish Theological Seminary, 3080 Broadway, New York, N.Y. 10027-4649.
